Course Description	The course examines the relationship between theological anthropology and eschatology, focusing on their interaction with contemporary issues such as technology, globalization, and ecological challenges. Students will explore key theological concepts related to human existence, including the significance of humans created in the image of God and the implications of technological advancement. The course begins with an overview of theological anthropology, emphasizing human dignity and purpose. Students will critically assess the theology of creation considering advancements in robotics and artificial intelligence, paying particular attention to the ethical challenges these developments pose. Discussions will highlight the theology of hope in a world often marked by techno-pessimism, exploring how faith can foster resilience. Additionally, students will engage in debates between anthropocentrism and theocentrism concerning ecological responsibility and consider how technological progress affects human freedom. Overall, this course aims to equip students with a nuanced understanding of theological anthropology and eschatology while encouraging critical engagement with contemporary societal challenges.
Educational Outcomes	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Identify key theological concepts related to theological anthropology and the theology of creation, including foundational principles. 2. Explain the implications of technological progress on the theology of creation, demonstrating comprehension of its influence on human existence. 3. Apply ethical frameworks to analyse case studies involving robotics and artificial intelligence, using theological principles in practical scenarios. 4. Analyse the horizontal and vertical dimensions of human existence, examining their interaction within the context of globalization and communication. 5. Evaluate the challenges posed by contemporary technologies on eschatological beliefs, assessing their impact on traditional views of death and eternal life.
