Teaching Language: English

Course Description	The course aims to introduce students to the development and activities of national movements in non-German nations of the Habsburg/Austro-Hungarian Monarchy (Croatians, Hungarians, Czechs, Italians, Slovenes, Slovaks). Students will be introduced to the main determinants of the development of the national movement of individual nations in the "long 19th century"; in addition to their political forces, the emphasis will be placed on the broader social context and the importance of culture and art in national movements. Understanding of selected topics will be deepened through the preparation and presentation of a seminar paper. Through the use of relevant contemporary scientific literature, preparation of their own seminar paper and discussion, students will gain knowledge about all important political and cultural processes of national movements in the Habsburg Monarchy and will become familiar with the activities of their most significant representatives.
Educational Outcomes	1. Recognize the basic processes and master fundamental concepts of the development of national movements in the 19th century; 2. Observe the cause-and-effect relationships in these processes; 3. Collect professional and scientific literature and write a clear and structured seminar paper; 4. Adhere to ethical principles in work.
