Course Description	The course offers a general insight into a phenomenon of religion, especially through studying big world religions of today, their fundamental doctrines, moral and ritual teachings and written and spiritual traditions. Students will be informed of the specificities of each religion and of their similarities and differences with Christianity. Special attention will be given to the phenomenon of sects and new religious movements with a Catholic Church's stand on interreligious dialogue.
Educational Outcomes	1. Interpret key positions, terms and phenomenology of certain religions; 2. Explain inherent narratives of certain religions; 3. Assess the role of Christianity for Croatian and wider social context; 4. Elaborate the role and contribution of the Catholic Church in interreligious dialogue; 5. Adhere to ethical principles when using professional literature about religious sciences.
